

Ms. Bunch's Homeroom Room 116

During the break, please log in to ALEKS and Achieve 3000 and complete topics and read articles and answer questions. I will be assigning articles in Achieve, but feel free to read more than just the assigned ones.

Please check our Google Classroom daily. If you have not already joined, the code is 4zwou7l. We will also be using Flocabulary lessons. There are 2 students that have not joined this either. If you are one of them, the code is SH9K4V.

Hopefully you brought your Ghost book home with you. The ELA Department is posting questions and activities on Mifflin's website to complete as you read the book. Remember that most of the chapters are available as a read aloud on Youtube if it is difficult for you or if you didn't bring your book home. You may also check out digital library books despite branches being closed.

Each day you should be writing in a journal. I will begin providing daily prompts in the Google Classroom Tuesday. You may add your response as a comment to the prompt so the rest of the class can see, create a Google Doc for all your journal entries to share with me, or write in a notebook to be collected when we return.

Please use this as an opportunity to improve at math facts! Use the quick tables on ALEKS or make some flashcards. And I can not stress again--ALEKS topics! It is individualized for you! I will add some math lessons through Flocabulary, Khan Academy, and Edmentum in the coming days. Please check Google Classroom every day.

I am available by email, text or phone if you have questions about how to access something or need something explained. I can be reached during the normal school day. There may be times when I am in a meeting, but I will get back to you as soon as possible.
